KEEP CALM AND CARRY ON

The original copy of the famous flyer

This motto designed in 1939 by the British government was to be published in case Britain was invaded by German troops during WWII. Since the invasion did not materialise, the poster never made it to the public and had been forgotten until it was discovered in a box of books to be auctioned in London in 2001. Since then, it has become an international icon for a wide range of products or activities.

Why such a success?

It would seem that the appealing character of the motto resides in the fact that the two virtues it calls for, serenity and perseverance, are very much needed today and are often the key to solving a lot of personal problems we face in our daily life. Courage, which is the sum of these two virtues, is pretty much lacking nowadays as the world does not really exhort us to have any.

The world does not promote inner strength, quite the opposite. Instead of peace and serenity, the world offers us the torments of sin and of a guilty conscience; and instead of perseverance, it invites us to yield to the ever demanding tyranny of our passions and impulses, making it hard to stick to any worthwhile goal we set to accomplish.

Deep down, we know it is not right. In our inner self, we long for the gift to remain composed in front of adversity. To be destabilised by unpleasant or unexpected events reveals some kind of weakness, a fragility we are ashamed of. The courageous ones do not get into panic mode for any reason.

Why are we so weak today?

For lack of a profound spiritual life. A close relationship with Our Lord makes us act the right way when difficulties arise.

In order to keep your cool, beware of too much info, for instance. The modern media apparatus continually feeds us with news from all over the world demanding from us immediate and superficial reaction thus burdening our nervous system and making us oversensitive and gradually lose our common sense and critical judgment.

Take everything you read on the Internet with a grain of salt. There are so many so-called religious, political and scientific websites that deceive more than they inform. They often have only one contributor who can easily hide his incompetence behind the shining façade of a well-designed webpage.

Focus on what matters. Focus on real life. Have your priorities well set.

"Keep calm and carry on" for a Catholic means to be faithful to one's daily duties, the famous duty of state, living under the loving gaze of Our Lord Jesus Christ, doing everything for Him and trusting in His Divine Providence.

Father Fabrice Loschi

The patient man is better than the valiant: and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh cities. [Prov. 16.32]
