VOCATIONS FROM LARGE FAMILIES

Out of 11 children of the French Traditional Catholic G lineau Family, 8 consecrated themselves to God. (The 8th one, a Benedictine cloistered nun, is not in the picture.)

"I am convinced that the true solution to increase the number of vocations and their perseverance, does not reside primarily in human and, so to speak, "technical" means, such as newsletters, apostolic visits or publicity. First of all, a vocation needs to hatch in a home where Our Blessed Lord, with his Cross and His priesthood, is loved. A home where there is no spirit of bitterness or criticism towards priests. It is through osmosis, through contact with truly Catholic parents and priests deeply imbued with the spirit of Our Lord Jesus Christ that a vocation awakens. It is at this level that we must continue to work with all our strength. A vocation is never the result of speculative reasoning, or from a lesson we have received, with which we intellectually agree. These elements can help someone answer God's call, but only if we follow what we said earlier."

*Fr. Davide Pagliarani,
Superior
General of the Society of St. Pius X*

*A Belgian Traditional Catholic mother.
(She now has 11 children.)*

"Women will be saved through childbearing."
(St. Paul, I Tim. 2:15)

"In general, for every three children, there is one vocation!"
(Don Bosco)
